Camping it up at Denim & Diamonds: (from left) Bruce Sutka, Grace Jones and David Negri.

Quite a crowd in town last weekend, including a reunion of sorts at Mar-a-Lago, where Donald Trump had a familiar face — and body — by his side. That's right, girlfriend Melania Knauss, who took a temporary back seat to politics, was back for The Donald's pro-am tennis tournament.

Financier Michael Milken, a prostate cancer survivor, played, as did actor Stephen Baldwin, singer Michael Bolton and pros Roscoe Tanner and John Lloyd, among others. They helped raise $2 million for CaP Cure, a charity dedicated to treating and curing prostate cancer.

One celebrity, however, was not so obvious. Even when Trump announced England's Prince Andrew, many in the crowd doubted his presence. For one, he stayed in the background, introducing himself as Andrew York, and for two, he's recently shed 20 pounds, making him a possible double for actor Rupert Everett.

Meanwhile, more than 1,700 guests turned out in Wellington for Denim & Diamonds, the largest charity gala in the Palm Beaches. It raised more than $300,000 for the U.S. Equestrian Team and the Equestrian AIDS Foundation.
